PREFACE

This book is a product of the Illinois Historical Survey of the University of Illinois. When an exhaustive survey of the history of the state, looking toward the preparation of a Centennial history, was decided upon about four years ago, one of the first desiderata appeared to be a knowledge of what was already in print. The writer began, therefore, to compile on cards a comprehensive bibliography of Illinois history. The cards were duplicated and filed in an alphabetical and in a combined topical, chronological, and geographical arrangement. The original plan was to publish the entire bibliography, in its classified form; but the number of cards became so large — there are now over six thousand items listed — and the labor involved in securing exact titles, looking up editions, and preparing annotations was so great that it soon became evident that the entire bibliography could not be published within a reasonable length of time.

Two methods of procedure then presented themselves: a select bibliography, listing only the more important books in each class, might be compiled; or certain classes might be completed and published entire. The latter method was finally decided upon for the time being; and the three bibliographies in this volume are the first published results of the work of the Illinois Historical Survey. When the manuscript was ready for the press, the Trustees of the State Historical Library offered to include it in the Bibliographical series of the Illinois historical collections. An excellent start had already been made in this series by the publication of Scott, Newspapers and periodicals of Illinois; and it seemed that the convenience of students who would use the bibliographies would be facilitated by accepting the offer.

Although constant use has been made of assistants for routine work, the compiler takes entire responsibility for the accuracy and completeness of the results. He has, with a few exceptions, examined the books himself, verified the titles and written the annotations. Of the fourteen libraries listed on a later page, work was done personally in all but two — the Peabody and the British Museum. The plan has been, with reference to the libraries in Illinois, the Wisconsin Historical Library, and the Library of Congress, to have the key letters indicate whether the item is or is not to be found in the library. The other libraries were searched mainly for items which could not be found in these, and the absence of key letters for them does not mean that they do not possess the items.

That there are many errors in the work, the compiler feels sure; but he also feels that anyone who has attempted similar bibliographical work and knows its difficulties will be lenient with them. The principles of exclusion and inclusion are explained in the introductions to the separate bibliographies. Even under these rules, items will doubtless be missed which are better entitled to a place than many of those included. In spite of these unavoidable shortcomings it is believed that the work will be of service to students of western history. The bibliography of travel and description contains, necessarily, many works of as much interest for other parts of the country as for Illinois and it is hoped that it will serve as a contribution toward a bibliography of works of this sort for the country as a whole.

The compiler is under obligations to officials in all of the libraries visited for assistance and privileges which facilitated the work. Special acknowledgments are due to the late Dr. Reuben G. Thwaites of the Wisconsin Historical Society, Miss Caroline M. McIlvaine and Mr. Marius Dahl of the Chicago Historical Society, Miss C. A. Smith and Dr. Augustus H. Shearer of the Newberry Library and Mrs. Jessie Palmer Weber and Miss Georgia Osborne of the Illinois State Historical Library. To Professor Clarence W. Alvord, editor of the Collections, I am indebted for many helpful suggestions and constant advice. Assistance in gathering and verifying data has been rendered by Mrs. Maude S. Ponton and Mr. Ernest Kletsch of the Library of Congress; Dr. Herbert A. Kellar, formerly of the University of Wisconsin; and Miss Winifred Fehrenkamp and Miss Edith Emigh of the library staff of the University of Illinois. In preparing the index I have had the assistance of Miss Lydia M. Brauer of the Illinois State Historical Library staff.

TRAVEL AND DESCRIPTION

INTRODUCTION

A man possessed of information about remote countries and peoples, especially if acquired by personal observation and experience, has always been sure of a hearing. Ever since the days of Marco Polo the returned traveler has been under a strong temptation to write a book. Few have resisted this temptation and, as a result, the output of books of travel has been enormous. Such books, having served their immediate purpose, usually pass into the discard for the time being; but years later historians of the countries about which they are written rescue them from oblivion and use them as aids in the work of reconstructing the past. Unfortunately a very large proportion of travelers have thought it necessary to enliven their books by blending a certain amount of fiction with the facts; and, even when they have sought to depict things as they are, they have been superficial observers and their conclusions have been colored by prejudices and preconceived ideas.

In spite of these defects, works of travel, when used by critical historians who take account of the prejudices and opportunities for observation of the writers and who balance one with another, have an important place among the sources of history. To use them for data on population when census statistics are available or for facts about the laws when the statutes themselves could be examined would be unjustifiable; but for a knowledge of manners and customs of daily life such works are often invaluable. They bring out the things which are so familiar to the native that he does not deem them worthy of record.

In the bibliography which follows, an attempt is made to list all books or items containing accounts of travel in the territory included within the state of Illinois from its occupation by the British in 1765 to the end of the year 1865. Other descriptive works, such as geographies, guide-books, and gazetteers are also included in the list. Until recent years such geographical compilations were based largely on the accounts of travelers and they have been used in turn by the travelers as companions on their journeys and as storehouses from which information might be drawn to supplement their own observations. Apart from the facts which such geographical works may contain, they are of interest as depicting the prevailing state of knowledge, or ignorance, about the countries described.

It has seemed best to reserve works of travel and description before 1765 for inclusion in a complete bibliography of the French régime in Illinois. The list closes with the year 1865 because the number of items since that date is so large and because this sort of material is as a whole of relatively less importance in recent years. During the century covered, the plan has been to include, besides the travels, practically all contemporary descriptions of a general character. Descriptions of a single town or county and encyclopedia articles have, as a rule, been excluded.

In arranging the items in chronological order absolute consistency has not been possible. The actual date of the observations has generally been used for books of travel; for geographical compilations, however, the date of publication has usually been the only one available. For travels covering more than one year and for geographical compilations issued in more than one edition, with revisions, inclusive dates have been used.

In the notes the first paragraph lists the editions, the second contains the annotation, and the last lists reviews or notices. No attempt has been made to find all reviews, but references which were at hand were included. Whenever possible, however, they were verified and in those which came from Sabin, Dictionary of books relating to America, a large percentage of error was found. In references to works in which the items are arranged alphabetically, it has seemed unnecessary to indicate the page or number, unless the item is entered under a different word from that used in the present list. References to bibliographies are included only when the item referred to contains an annotation.

When the treaty of Paris (1763) transferred the Illinois country from France to Great Britain, the knowledge which Englishmen possessed of that region was scanty and based almost entirely on French accounts. With the occupation of the country by British troops in 1765, however, many Englishmen had an opportunity to see it themselves and a number of these left accounts of their experiences or descriptions of the country based on personal observation. The first Englishmen to reach the French settlements in the Illinois after the French and Indian War appear to have been Lieutenant John Ross and a trader named Crawford. Sent up from Mobile to conciliate the Indians, they arrived in February, 1765, and returned the following April. Ross constructed a map of the Mississippi River, which was published in 1772; but neither of these men, so far as is known, left narrative accounts of the expedition or descriptions of the country based on their observations.

Shortly after Ross departed Lieutenant Fraser arrived from the East, followed by Croghan, who penetrated only a short distance into the territory of the present state of Illinois. Before the end of the year Captain Sterling, Lieutenant Eidington (or Eddington), Major Farmar, and Captain Pittman were in the Illinois country. All these men wrote accounts of their experiences or descriptions of the country, the most pretentious and the only one which was published at the time being The present state of the European settlements on the Mississippi by Pittman.¹

The following year Captain Gordon and Ensign Hutchins traveled together to the Illinois. Gordon's journal of this trip was published ten years later and Hutchins, Topographical description, appeared in 1778. To these accounts by military men may be added the narratives of the traders, Jennings, Clarkson and Morgan, who began operations in the Illinois in 1776. None of their journals was published, however, until many years later. Other important items during the British period are those of Phyn, Butricke, and Kennedy and the Invitation serieuse. This last document is especially interesting as being the earliest book published in America, so far as is known, in which the Illinois country is described.

The first geographical work on the British empire after the treaty of Paris is Robert Rogers, Concise account of North America. The author claims in his preface to have acquired most of his information about the interior country east of the Mississippi from personal observation. However true this may be, his description of the Illinois country is interesting and unusually accurate. It contains what is probably the first of many prophecies about the prospects of the site of Cairo. In spite of the publication of Rogers' description in 1765 and of Pittman's more important work of 1770 most of the compilers of geographies and gazetteers throughout the period were content with vague and inaccurate descriptions of the western country based upon French accounts and upon Coxe, Carolana, the first edition of which appeared in 1722. An example is Entick, Present state of the British empire (1774).

For the period from the coming of Clark in 1778 to the coming of St. Clair and the establishment of territorial government in 1790, the amount of descriptive material is very slight. Bowman's letter in the Remembrancer appears to be the only account based on personal observation which was published during the period; while the letters and journals of Clark and Bowman, the narratives of Perrault and Biggs, and the letters of Harmar and St. Clair comprise about all the first hand material of a descriptive nature which is available at the present day.

The most interesting descriptions in the geographical compilations are those in Jefferson, Notes, and in the first of the many editions of Morse's geographies. The first edition of the Geography made easy was published in 1784 and is the earliest American book in the English language containing a description of the Illinois country. The more extensive American geography appeared first in 1789.

For the period 1790 to 1800, when Illinois was a part of the Northwest Territory, the most important works are those of the elder Michaux, Collot, Volney, Ellicott, and Austin. All these men were travelers who wrote narratives of their experiences and descriptions based on observations and on information gathered during their travels. The books of Volney and Ellicott appeared in 1803, but the works of the others were not published until many years later. Volney was especially interested in the French colonies or settlements in the West; and, although he went no farther west than Vincennes, the chapter "De la colonie du Poste-Vincennes sur Ouabache, et des colonies françaises sur le Missi-sipi et le Lac Erie" in his Tableau throws considerable light on conditions in the Illinois country about 1796.

The Topographical description of Gilbert Imlay is the most interesting of the geographical compilations published during this period. His account of the country north and west of the Ohio is rather general and is confined principally to its physical geography; but this is followed by curious speculations as to the future settlement of the country and new states which might be carved out of it. In the other geographical works of the period the accounts of the western country are based almost entirely on those in Morse's geographies. Among them are Scott, United States gazetteer, and Carey's American pocket atlas, each the first work of its kind to appear in the United States.

Illinois was a part of Indiana Territory from 1800 to 1809. For this period the most important books in the bibliography are those of Reynolds, Cramer, Pike, Schulz; and Cuming. Reynolds, My own times is too well known to need further comment here. The Navigator of Zadok Cramer in its numerous editions was one of the most useful guide-books ever published and the detailed descriptions, revised from time to time, make it especially useful to the historical student today. Mention should also be made of Ashe, whose book tells of so many wonderful sights and thrilling experiences that it is charitable to classify him as a romanticist.

The first six years during which Illinois was a separate territory, 1809-15, were not a period of rapid growth. Indian troubles were acute during most of the period, there was much difficulty about procuring titles to land, the population increased but little, and the territory was visited by few travelers. As a consequence descriptive material of value is scarce for this period. The only visitors of particular interest during these years who left records of their travels are two Presbyterian clergymen sent out by the Massachusetts Missionary Society. In 1812-13 Rev. John F. Schermerhorn and Rev. Samuel J. Mills made a tour through the West under the auspices of the Massachusetts and Connecticut missionary societies. Their route lay through Kentucky and Tennessee to New Orleans, but Schermerhorn's report contains a statement about religious conditions in Illinois. Two years later, in the winter of 1814-15, Mills returned to the West accompanied by Daniel Smith and spent some time in Illinois Territory. The experiences and observations of these early missionaries, as told in their letters, are of considerable interest.

The development of Illinois Territory during its last three years, following the close of the War of 1812, was very rapid. Immigrants rushed in from the South, from the East, and from England; new settlements were started and new counties organized; and the territory occupied a prominent place in the public eye. As might be expected, many travelers who visited the territory during these years left accounts of their observations which portray the rapidly shifting conditions of this frontier community. Among the most important of these are the works of Timothy Flint, Birkbeck, Fearon, Long, and Fordham. Another book of interest for this period is Brown, Western gazetteer. This is one of the earliest of the many books intended to assist emigrants in selecting a location in the western country and its descriptions were much drawn upon by later writers.

From 1818, the year in which Illinois was admitted to the Union, to 1865 inclusive the state was visited by many travelers who wrote contemporary accounts of their experiences and observations. The bibliography lists the works of one hundred and seventy-seven such travelers; and it may be of some interest to classify them according to nationality. The extent of British interest in America and especially in the West is brought out by the fact that fifty-eight of these travelers were English, while only fifty-three of them were Americans. Thirty-one were German; ten, French; eight, Scotch; five, Norwegian; three, Irish; three, Canadian; two, Italian; two, Dutch; one, Swedish; and one, Swiss.

The average number of these travelers per year from 1818 to 1865 is between three and four, and there is hardly a year during the period for which it is not possible to find several impressions of Illinois or of parts of the state from observers of different nationality and with different points of view. For 1819, for example, there are the narratives of two Englishmen, Faux and Welby; of one German, Ernst; and of two Americans, James and Wright. For 1832 the travelers are O'Ferrall, Irish; Pavie, French; Latrobe, English; and Maximilian, German.

The list of travelers embraces the names of many men of national or international distinction in addition to many more of considerable local prominence. First there are the titled foreigners, such as the Duke of Württemberg, Lafayette, the Duke of Saxe-Weimar-Eisenach, the Prince of Wied-Neuwied, the Earl of Carlisle, the Prince of Wales, and Prince Napoleon. The three Germans and the Earl of Carlisle wrote their own accounts, but the books telling of the trips of the others are by other members of the parties. Then there are the literary people: Charles Sealsfield; Dickens, whose American notes stirred up a hornet's nest; James Hall, one of the literary pioneers of the West; Schoolcraft, whose books on the American Indians are almost countless; Captain Marryat, the English novelist; Margaret Fuller; Bayard Taylor, William Cullen Bryant; James K. Paulding; and Fredrika Bremer, the Swedish novelist. Other prominent people included are, Nuttall and Audubon, naturalists; Beltrami, the Italian explorer; Major Long and Lieutenant Pike, American explorers; Featherstonhaugh, the geologist; and Horace Greeley.

Among the gazetteers and guide-books, the various works of John Mason Peck occupy first place, partly because of the importance of Peck himself but also because of the care with which they were compiled. Other works of this class of unusual value are Beck, Gazetteer of Illinois and Missouri; the publications of Traugott Bromme; Illinois in 1837; the detailed descriptions of the military tract by Van Zandt and Dana; Abner Jones, Illinois and the West; Curtiss, Western Portraiture; and Gerhard, Illinois as it is. Timothy Flint's western geographies are pioneers in a somewhat different field.

Quite a number of rare and little known books of value are listed in the bibliography. Among them are: the Memoir of Alvan Stone; Reisebericht der Familie Köpfli & Suppiger; Rev. S. Wood, Letters from the United States; George Flower, Errors of emigrants; Köhler, Briefe aus Amerika; Gregory, To all those emigrating West; Kingman, Journal of a tour to the West; the pamphlet of the Illinois Land Company; Campbell, A glance at Illinois; and several of the Scandinavian books, such as Rynning, Sandfaerdig; Reierson, Veiviser; Dietrichson, Reise; and Cassell, Amerika i vor Tid. Of the Map of the military bounty lands . . . with a description, no copy has been located; and only a part of Schmölder, Wegweiser, could be found, although two editions are listed by Sabin.

A considerable amount of biographical and reminiscent material has been included in the bibliography, especially when the items contain extracts from contemporary letters and journals. Much interesting descriptive matter is to be found in those works together with other material of value. They include biographies or autobiographies of Governors John Reynolds and John M. Palmer; Gurdon S. Hubbard, the fur-trader and Chicago business man; Colonel George T. M. Davis, newspaper man of Alton; Gustav Koerner, one of the leaders of the Germans in Illinois; Jonathan B. Turner, educator; and seven pioneer ministers of the gospel: John M. Peck, Peter Cartwright, Julian M. Sturtevant, Augustus Conant, Truman M. Post, John Clark, and Philander Chase.

While works which are purely local have been excluded, the bibliography, with the notes and index, will serve as a guide to a large amount of local material in general works. One of the most interesting movements in American colonization is the English settlement established by Morris Birkbeck and George Flower in Edwards County. The books written by the founders and other members of this settlement are numerous and frequently ran through many editions, while nearly every traveler who visited Illinois from 1818 to 1825 made a point to see the English settlement and give his opinions of it in his book. As a result the quantity of literature on the subject is very extensive. The bibliography contains, it is believed, the largest list of items bearing on the English settlement ever compiled and while scattered over a number of years the student will find it possible to locate them all readily.

by means of the index. Similarly, the index can be used to assist in picking out items on a variety of special topics, such as education, immigration, Indians and Mormons.

Croghan went down the Ohio to about the site of Shawneetown where he was captured by Indians and carried to Vincennes and Ouiatanon. Being released by the Indians he started for Fort de Chartres but met Pontiac, returned with him to Ouiatanon where a peace was agreed upon, and then went to Detroit. The first version of the journal, which is much more detailed than the other, describes parts of eastern Illinois, and throws light on conditions among the French and Indians in the Illinois country. The second or official version tells of the negotiations with the Indians. See also letter written by Croghan, July 12, 1765, printed by Alvord and Carter.

Reprinted in ALVORD & CARTER, Occupation and trade (see no. 5).

Eidington, or Eddingstone as the name is given in the army lists, was an officer in the British troops which were sent from Fort Pitt to take possession of the Illinois country. The letter, which is dated October 17, tells briefly of the trip, of the fur trade, and of the French villages. It is one of a number of "Documents relating to the occupation of the Illinois country by the British" edited by Clarence E. Carter.

Reprinted in ALVORD & CARTER, Occupation and trade (see no. 5).

Sterling commanded the detachment sent from Fort Pitt to take possession of the Illinois country. In these letters dated October 10, 18, and December 15, he describes the French villages and tells of his experiences. Inclosures contain a description of Fort de Chartres and an inventory of goods therein. The letters are edited by Clarence E. Carter (see no. 2).

Farmar, Major [Robert]. [Letters from the Illinois country.] C. W. ALVORD & C. E. CARTER, Occupation and trade, 1763-1766 (Illinois historical collections, x. Springfield, Illinois State Historical Library, in press). 5

In these letters dated December 16 and 19, 1765 and March 19, 1766, Farmar tells of his expedition up the Mississippi to the Illinois and gives a few notes on the soil, agricultural products, French settlements, and Indians.

Fraser, [Lieutenant Alexander]. Report [on the Illinois country]. ALVORD & CARTER, Occupation and trade (see no. 5). 5a

Fraser arrived from the East in May, 1765 but was obliged by the hostility of the Indians to leave for New Orleans. He returned in December with Major Farmar. In this report to General Haldimand, dated May 4, 1766, he writes briefly of his trip to the West and gives an account of the country. He treats of the prairies, soil, agricultural products, Indians, trade, and French settlements. See also his letters dated May 15-20 and December 16, 1765, in the same volume.

Pittman was an engineer with the British troops and arrived in West Florida in 1763 or 1764. He was in the Illinois country making surveys and investigations from November or December 1765 to near the close of 1768. The book contains descriptions of the French villages and general accounts of the Illinois country, of its government under the French, and of its inhabitants. It is a valuable, but not entirely reliable source of information about conditions in the Illinois during the British period. The sections relating to the Illinois country are reprinted in Alvord & Carter, Occupation and trade (see no. 5).

Gordon, Captain Harry. [Journal of an expedition from Philadelphia to the Illinois and down the Mississippi to New Orleans.] CHARLES A. HANNA, The wilderness trail, II, 40–55 (New York & London, Putnam, 1911. 2 v.) UINWL 9

Reprinted in part in MISSOURI HISTORICAL SOCIETY, Collections, III, 437–443 (1911). IHWL—An “abridged and inaccurate version” of part of the “Journal” was published in POWNALL, Topographical description, appendix iv, pp. 2–5 (no. 28a).

UIHNWL — This version is reprinted in ILLINOIS STATE HISTORICAL SOCIETY, Journal, II, no. 2, pp. 55-64 (July, 1909).

UIHJNWL — Reprinted from the original manuscript in ALVORD & CARTER, Trade and land speculation (see no. 13a).

The complete journal tells in detail of the trip down the Ohio and up the Mississippi, with descriptions of the country, the forts, and the French villages, and comments on the fur trade. Gordon was accompanied by George Croghan and a letter from him, dated at Fort de Chartres, September 10, 1766, is printed by Hanna (pp. 49-51) and also by Alvord and Carter.

Hutchins was a captain in the British army and was in the Illinois country in 1766 and from 1768 to 1770. His book, which was intended to explain the accompanying map, is one of the most valuable sources for the Illinois country during the British period. It contains statistics of population for 1771 and a reference to the abandonment of Fort de Chartres in 1772. The Hicks edition is the best for the student. It contains a biographical sketch of Hutchins and a list of his works with bibliographical data. For a somewhat different version of the part relating to the Illinois, see "Hutchins' Description of Illinois, 1770," in Alvord & Carter, Eve of the Revolution (see no. 13a). Clark wrote several accounts of his expedition, all of which are included in the above. His "Letter to Mason" was first published as Col. George Rogers Clark's Sketch of his campaign in the Illinois in 1778-9; with an introduction by Hon. Henry Pirtle of Louisville . . . Cincinnati, Clarke, 1869. viii, 119 p. (Ohio Valley historical series [no. 3].) — Clark's "Journal" was first published in the American historical review, I, 90-96 (October, 1895). His letter "to the governor of Virginia" was first published in Thomas Jefferson, Writings (Washington ed.), I, 222-226 (see no. 32). It is also in William W. Henry, Life, correspondence, and speeches of Patrick Henry, III, 233-238 (New York, Scribner, 1891. 3 v.) Clark's "Memoir" appeared first in William H. English, Conquest of the country northwest of the river Ohio and life of George Rogers Clark, I, 457-555 (Indianapolis, Bowen-Merrill, 1897. 2 v.) Inaccurate versions of the other documents also are in ibid., 385-391, 395-402, 411-456. Extracts from all of them are in H. W. Beckwith, Collections of the Illinois State Historical Library, I, passim (Springfield, Rokker, pr., 1903).

In these documents Clark tells of his march to Kaskaskia and of his subsequent activities in the Illinois country. They are valuable sources for a knowledge not only of the events of the American occupation, but also of the conditions in the French villages and the character of the country at that time.

A translation of the original in the Schoolcraft manuscripts of the Smithsonian Institution at Washington. Part of the narrative, also in translation, was published by Schoolcraft in his Information respecting the history, condition, and prospects of the Indian tribes of the United States, III, 351-369 (see no. 13). Perrault tells briefly of a trading expedition from Mackinac to St. Louis and Cahokia; of the winter there; and of the return in the spring.

English ed., ibid. 2 v. in 1, & atlas. MNWLD

Both editions are said to have been printed before the death of the author in 1805, but were not published until 1826 at which time all but one hundred copies of the English edition and three hundred of the French were destroyed. Collot visited the West, including Illinois, in 1796 at the request of Adet, the French minister to the United States. He describes in detail the Wabash, Ohio, Mississippi, and Illinois rivers and treats of the character and appearance of the country, with some information about the settlements. This part of the English edition is reprinted in Illinois State Historical Society, Transactions, 1908, pp. 269-298. The atlas contains a valuable detailed map of the American bottom, which has been several times reproduced.

The 1804 edition contains detailed directions for navigating the Ohio and the Mississippi below the mouth of the Ohio, with notes on islands, tributary streams, and settlements. It contains, also, descriptive matter on the Illinois country and its towns and rivers, based on the works of Hutchins and Kennedy (nos. 14, 25) and on a "MS Journal of Col. George Morgan, 1769." In later editions the directions for navigating the Mississippi begin at the mouth of the Illinois, and the appendixes contain descriptions of the Wabash, Saline, and Illinois rivers and their branches. Cramer was probably the first man to compile this sort of a guide to the western waters and his work was the foundation for Cumings, Western navigator and Western pilot (no. 179) and Gilleland, Ohio and Mississippi pilot (no. 158). It was much used by travelers, not only as a guide, but as a source of information for their books, and frequently without credit.

Ashe writes of a trip down the Ohio and up the Mississippi and gives accounts of the Indians, the settlements, and the physical condition of the country, but his intense hostility to America and Americans and the highly imaginative character of many of his incidents render the work of little value. According to Cramer, Navigator, 10th ed., 224-227 (no. 59), the descriptions are taken largely from the earlier editions of that work, without credit being given.

London, Carpenter, etc., 1812-15. 5 v.
HJWL 81

The Diccionario of Alcedo issued at Madrid in 1787 and suppressed by the Spanish government, dealt only with Latin America but the added articles in the translation (indicated by brackets) contain descriptive matter on the United States. The account of the West, however, seems to contain no information of a later date than about 1795.

Schermerhorn, John F. A correct view of that part of the United States which lies west of the Alleghany Mountains, with regard to religion and morals, by John F. Schermerhorn and Samuel J. Mills. Hartford, Gleason, pr., 1814. 52 p. UNW 82

These Presbyterian missionaries gathered the information upon which this pamphlet is based during a tour in the West in 1812-13 under the auspices of the Massachusetts and Connecticut missionary societies. They do not appear to have visited Illinois but Schermerhorn's statement contains several paragraphs upon religious conditions in the territory. The account of the various western sects, their characteristics and operations, is of interest. See also, a "Report respecting the Indians inhabiting the western parts of the United States, communicated by Mr. John F. Schermerhorn to the secretary of the Society for Propagating the Gospel among the Indians and others in North America," in Massachusetts historical collections, 2d series, II, 1-45 (1814); and Communications relative to the progress of Bible societies in the United States, addressed to the Bible Society of Philadelphia (Philadelphia, 1813. 24 p.) The Statistical account and the Geographical description were issued, with separate title-page, as part of his Traveller's directory, editions, 1814, 1814-15, and 1815 (see no. 88). The editions of 1816, 1818, and one of the 1819 editions contain the same material but without separate title-page. The Statistical view was appended to the 1822 and 1825 editions of the Traveller's directory. The work appears to have been issued originally to accompany Melish, Map of the United States. It contains a topographical description of Illinois, varying in extent in the different editions.

The Description of the roads has a separate title-page in the 1814, 1814-15, and 1815 editions of the Traveller's directory. The second 1819 and later editions contain description of routes only but his Statistical view (see no. 87) is appended to most copies of the 1822 and 1825 editions. The work is useful for information about routes of travel to and in Illinois.

The descriptive matter on Illinois is in an appendix entitled: "Remarks on the state of Ohio, Kentucky, and Indiana with the Illinois and Western Territory and on the emigration to those countries." This is a fair and informing general description of western life and conditions, the data for which, according to Thwaites, was gathered during a journey at the close of the War of 1812.

Lewis, Mrs. Hannah. Narrative of the captivity and sufferings of Mrs. Hannah Lewis, and her children, who were taken prisoners by the Indians, near St. Louis, on the 25th May, 1815, and among whom they experienced all the cruel treatment which savage brutality could inflict—Mrs. Lewis, and her eldest son fortunately made their escape on the 3d April last, leaving her two youngest children in the hands of the unmerciful barbarians. Boston, Trumbull, pr., 1817. 24 p. NW 90

Reprinted as Narrative of the captivity and providential escape of Mrs. Jane Lewis . . . [New York] 1833. 24 p. IN

The account is vague as to place but the captivity appears to have occurred in Illinois, if at all. The 1833 edition is a garbled reprint with some extraneous matter about Black Hawk and gives the date as 1821. It is probably the work of the compiler of the Hall Narrative (no. 244).

Thomas, David. Travels through the western country in the summer of 1816, including notices of the natural history, antiquities, topography, agriculture, commerce, and manufactures; with a map of the Wabash country now settling. Auburn, New York, Rumsey, pr., 1819. 320 p., map. UIHCNWL 92

Thomas's trip was made for the purpose of exploring the "Wabash lands in the New Purchase" and he spent much time in and about Vincennes, but does not appear to have crossed over into Illinois Territory. The book throws light, however, on general conditions, climate, prices, flora and fauna, commerce, etc., of the whole West. The map shows but a very little west of the Wabash, being what was within the Vincennes land district. The appendix contains a letter descriptive of the Illinois-Michigan water-route.

This is the first of the long list of books relating to the English settlement in Illinois. In it Birkbeck tells of a land-hunting expedition into southeastern Illinois and of a visit to Shawneetown. He was a keen observer and a good writer and the book is a valuable contribution to our knowledge of frontier people and conditions.

No trace of the later editions has been found except in Sabin. In the second 1817 edition there are some revisions, but the section devoted to Illinois is unchanged. This covers about eighteen pages and contains a general description of the territory with an account of its rivers, surface, products, and settlements. This section is reprinted in Illinois State Historical Society, Transactions, 1908, pp. 299–310 but the reprint is not absolutely verbatim and literatim. A few pages containing the description of the Illinois River and its tributaries are also reprinted in Illinois State Historical Society, Journal, II, no. 4, pp. 77–79 (January, 1910).

Peck, John M. Forty years of pioneer life; memoir of John Mason Peck; edited from his journals and correspondence by Rufus Babcock. Philadelphia, American Baptist Publishing Society [c. 1864]. 360 p. UIHNWL 110

This famous Baptist missionary started for the West in 1817 going by the rivers to St. Louis with a stop at Shawneetown on the way. In 1818 he made a tour through the American bottom and was in Kaskaskia while the constitutional convention was in session. In 1822 he located at Rock Spring, Illinois. He traveled extensively in all parts of the state, for missionary and other purposes, and his wide interests and keen powers of observation make the extracts from his journals and reminiscences of very great value. It is to be deplored that the great mass of papers from which these extracts were selected appears to have been destroyed.

Van Zandt had been a clerk in the general land office. His book contains, in addition to the detailed description of the military tract, general observations on Illinois and Missouri territories. It was much used by land-seekers. About fifteen pages are devoted to an unfavorable account of Birkbeck's settlement in Illinois. The copy in the Chicago Historical Library contains folding maps depicting the two United States survey townships in which the cities of Peoria and Warsaw are now located.

Hubbard came to Chicago in 1818 as an employee of the American Fur Company. He went by way of the Illinois River to St. Louis and Cahokia, spent the winter at a post near Hennepin and in the spring returned to Mackinac. He was with the Illinois brigade again in the winters of 1821-22 and 1822-23 and in 1822 he established "Hubbard's Trail" from Chicago to Danville. From 1828 to 1834 he lived in Danville and after that in Chicago. The autobiographical material covers his career to 1830, and furnishes a valuable picture of northern Illinois during the fur trade period. See also A. A. Hayes, Jr., "The metropolis of the prairies," in Harper's, LXI, 711-731 (October, 1880). This is based on Hubbard's notes.

These letters, two of which were first published in the Monthly repository (August, October, 1820), form a sort of continuation of the author's Letters from Lexington and the Illinois (no. 140), and describe life and conditions in the English settlement from January, 1820, to August, 1821. The notes of Benjamin Flower are extensive and include an extract from Frances Wright D'Arusmont, Views of society and manners in America (no. 137). Like the other books by Flower and Birkbeck this was undoubtedly designed to encourage emigration from England to the settlement and should be balanced by the accounts of less favorably disposed writers.

Schmidt, Frederich. Versuch über den politischen Zustand der Vereinigten Staaten von Nord America enthaltend: Untersuchungen über die Lage, den Flächengehalt und die physische Beschaffenheit des Landes, über die politische Eintheilung und die Zahl seiner Bewohner; über den Zustand des Ackerbaues, der Viehzucht, der Fischereien, der Manufacturen und des Handels; über Banken und Bank-Verwirrung; über die traurigen Verhältnisse des Landes im Allgemeinen; über Regierung, Staatseinkünfte, Land- und Seemacht und die Zahl der Stammvölker; über die ihnen zugefügten Misshandlungen, ihre Sitten und Gebräuche, ihren Ursprung und ihre Denkmäler. Stuttgart & Tübingen, Cotta, 1822. 2 v. E 170

The author states that his work is the result of four years observation in the United States. Besides much incidental matter on the West and Illinois in other chapters, the chapter entitled "Politische Eintheilung des Landes" has a six-page section on the state; its location, rivers, soil, climate, products, inhabitants, religion, and chief towns. Schmidt's impressions of America were unfavorable.

Sabin says that Cumings, Navigator and Pilot are amplifications of Cramer, Navigator (no. 59), "without acknowledgment of the main source of their material." See also Gilleland, Ohio and Mississippi pilot (no. 158). These books were much used by travelers and were revised from time to time in the different editions. The advertisement of the 1832 edition states that the surveys for the charts were originally executed in 1819-21 but that resurveys had been made and the charts corrected. This edition contains descriptions of the Mississippi and Missouri rivers from Flint, Geography and history (no. 211); and sketches entitled "The last of the boatmen" and "The French village" from James Hall, Western souvenir.

Mrs. Trollope's book is based mainly on experiences at Cincinnati; but it is a picture, though an exaggerated one, of social conditions throughout the West. It called forth a number of replies among which are: American criticisms on Mrs. Trollope's "Domestic manners . . . " (London, Rich, 1833. 64 p. — 2d ed., ibid. 68 p.); [Calvin Colton] The Americans . . . (London, Westley & Davis, 1833. xii, 389 p.); [Shelton] The Trollopiad; or Travelling gentlemen

The only difference between the two editions is that the one with 654 pages has an index. Besides useful material in the various general chapters and the chapter on the Mississippi basin, there is a brief special section devoted to Illinois, and a map of the state. The work is doubtless a compilation from other books. The review of this book in the American quarterly, listed below, is said by James Hall in his "Notes on Illinois" (no. 233) to be "the most compendious and accurate description that we have seen of the great plain upon which our state is situated."

Captain Hall went from Louisville to St. Louis by the rivers and then across Illinois by land in May, 1828. His account of this part of the tour is brief but contains a description of the Illinois prairies. The book drew forth several replies. See, for example [Richard Biddle], Captain Hall in America by an American (Philadelphia, Carey & Lea, 1830. 120 p.) This was reprinted in England as A review of Captain Basil Hall's travels . . . by an American (London, Kennett, 1830. 149 p.—2d ed., London, 1830). See also [Calvin Colton] The Americans, by an American in London (London, Westley & Davis, 1833. xii, 389 p.) One chapter of Mrs. Trollope, Domestic manners of the Americans (no. 204) deals with Hall's book and its reception in America.

Some of these letters appeared in the Portfolio (Dennie's) during 1821–25. Those of most interest for Illinois, including one on Shawneetown, and others on such subjects as backwoods, emigration, and tales of travelers, do not appear to have been so published. They contain excellent material on the social conditions of the West in the early days. Mrs. Kinzie accompanied her husband on a trip from Fort Winnebago (Portage), Wisconsin, overland via Dixon's Ferry to Chicago. They remained in Chicago two months and then returned. Her narrative of the trip and descriptions of Chicago and the Indian country of northern Illinois are detailed and interesting. The book contains also a famous account of the Chicago massacre in 1812, and sidelights on the Black Hawk War.

Stone was a young Baptist who went to Illinois in 1831, partly as a result of the influence of Rev. John M. Peck, and died there in 1833. He taught school in several places and traveled somewhat in the southern part of the state and in the military tract. About half of the book consists of extracts from his letters and diary during these years. These contain descriptions of the country and notes on the life and religious condition of the people. Some of these extracts are reprinted in Illinois State Historical Society, Journal, III, no. 4, pp. 85-97 (January, 1911).

Contains a diary of Suppiger telling of the trip by way of the Ohio and Mississippi rivers, letters by Salomon Köpfli, and an extensive account of the settlement by Dr. Kaspar Köpfli.

A true picture of emigration; or, Fourteen years in the interior of North America; being a full and impartial account of the various difficulties and ultimate success of an English family who emigrated from Barwick-in-Elmet, near Leeds, in the year 1831. London, Berger [1848]. 62 p. UIHWL 235

This family came to Illinois by way of New Orleans and the Mississippi River. They landed at Phillip's Ferry on the Illinois River, where Valley City is now located, and secured a farm in Pike County. The account is given as by the mother of the family but appears from the preface to have been put into literary form by a son who remained in England and to whom she told her experiences during a visit to her native land. The greater part of the pamphlet is devoted to the trials and experiences of the first few years and it is an excellent picture of frontier life. There were a considerable number of English families among the early settlers of Pike County. See History of Pike County (Chicago, Chapman, 1880).

An anonymous work frequently attributed to Robert Baird. The author acknowledges his indebtedness to other writers but also claims that much of his information was derived from personal observation and refers to letters from his pen published in the New York observer and in the Sunday school journal of Philadelphia. Besides general descriptive and historical chapters and chapters on such subjects as schools, churches, steam-boats, and hints to emigrants, there is a chapter of twenty pages devoted specifically to Illinois. This is based largely on Peck, Guide for emigrants (no. 236). The book contains a small map of Illinois and Missouri.

Latrobe was an Englishman who went down the Ohio and up the Mississippi to St. Louis in 1832. The following year he visited Chicago at the time when an Indian treaty was being negotiated and then went across the state to St. Louis. From there he made a trip by land to Prairie du Chien via Peoria and Galena; then up the Mississippi to the Falls of St. Anthony and back down the river to New Orleans. His descriptions of the country traversed and the towns visited are interesting and valuable.

Maximilian spent the winter of 1832-33 at New Harmony and making excursions into the surrounding territory. In the spring he went down the Ohio and up the Mississippi to St. Louis and then westward up the Missouri. Returning in 1834 to St. Louis, he crossed the Mississippi to visit the Indian mounds in Illinois and then continued eastward by the rivers. As a naturalist he was interested primarily in plants, animals, and archeological remains, but the work contains some information about the people and settlements as well.

Davis, Geo[rg]e T. M. Autobiography of the late Col. Geo. T. M. Davis, captain and aid-de-camp Scott's army of invasion (Mexico), from posthumous papers; published by his legal representatives. New York [Jenkins & McCowan, pr.], 1891. 395 p. UICL 255

Davis moved from New York to Alton, Illinois, in 1832. He writes interestingly of his life there, of frontier conditions, of personal experiences and observations in connection with the murder of Lovejoy and the Mormon War, of recruiting for the Mexican War, of his experiences in the war itself, and of Illinois and local politics after his return. In 1850 he left Alton to accept a government clerkship in Washington. Later he lived in Louisville, Kentucky, and then in New York City. The book is an interesting and valuable source.

Koerner emigrated to America in 1833, traveling from New York to St. Louis and locating near Belleville in St. Clair County. He tells of his trip and of many others in various parts of Illinois, especially during the decade of the thirties. The book furnishes a valuable picture of conditions in the state and especially in the so-called Latin settlement during this early period. Later on it is more valuable for the light which it throws on state and national politics. See also, H. A. Some copies of the 1837 edition have the cover-title: Illinois in 1837 & 8; with a map; containing also the Emigrants' guide to the West. Philadelphia, Grigg & Elliot, 1838. The copy of

The Far West in the Library of Congress is incomplete, containing only forty-six pages. The work is a detailed compilation based largely on Peck, Gazetteer of Illinois (no. 278) without acknowledgment. Sabin says the publisher is probably the author and that "it was gotten up mainly to promote the sale of Illinois lands then owned by John Grigg, of Philadelphia."

The six "Letters from a rambler" are said to be "from the pen of a talented young Philadelphian," who was corresponding for the Pennsylvania inquirer and daily courier in which paper they were first published. They were written during the first three months of 1837 and contain valuable descriptions of Chicago, Vandalia, Peoria, Peru, Springfield, Jacksonville, and Alton; also accounts of a prairie fire and of a snow storm on the prairie, and a statement of the advantages of the West.

Also, New York, Phelps & Ensign, 1840. 347 p. L — Ibid., 1841. 367 p. UI — New York, Ensign, 1843. 371 p. L — Ibid., 1844. 371 p. W

The edition of 1841 differs from the previous editions only in containing an appendix of additional entries and tables of statistics including some from the census of 1840. The work was copyrighted in 1838. The "general view" of Illinois fills two columns and contains a sketch of the internal improvement scheme.

Daubeny, Charles [G. B.] Journal of a tour through the United States and in Canada, made during the years 1837-38 . . . Oxford, Combe, pr., 1843. vi, 231 p., map. HWL 323

Printed in a limited edition for private circulation only. The writer traveled up the east side of the Mississippi River through Cahokia to St. Louis. Later he visited Alton and then went down the Mississippi and up the Ohio.

Henshaw, David. Letters on internal improvements and commerce of the West. Boston, Dutton & Wentworth, pr., 1839. 29 p. L 325

The last letter, written from Peoria, December 26, 1838, describes the projected internal improvement system of Illinois.

Jones, A[bner] D. Illinois and the West, with a township map, containing the latest surveys and improvements. Boston, Weeks, etc., 1838. 256 p., map. MIHCNWL 326

Jones was a New Englander on a prospecting tour in Illinois. He tells of his trip from St. Louis through Alton and Peoria to Tremont in Tazewell County, where he stopped some time; of a side trip to the Rock River country; and of the return to the East via Peru, Joliet, and Chicago. The book contains, also, chapters on education and agriculture in Illinois, advice to emigrants, and Ellsworth's letter on the cultivation of the prairies, which had previously been printed in Illinois in 1837 (no. 313).

Kingman, John. Letters written while on a tour to Illinois and Wisconsin in the summer of 1838. Hingham, Farmer, pr., 1842. 48 p. S 327

The only copy of this very rare book which has been located belongs to Dr. Otto L. Schmidt of Chicago. Kingman describes Chicago, and tells of a trip to Warrenville in what is now Du Page County.

Also [Washington, 1845]. (28 CONGRESS, 2 SESSION, House documents, no. [168?], serial 497.) JCNWL

The first edition is printed with a message from the president, the whole document being given the title: Mineral lands in the United States. It does not contain the maps and illustrations which are to be found in the later editions and which are of considerable interest. The part of Illinois included is the Galena mining area. Besides much geological and mineralogical information of a general nature, the report contains brief descriptions of each township.

De Bow's Review, January, 1848.

Peck, John M. The traveller's directory for Illinois; containing . . . accurate sketches of the state, a particular description of each county, and important business towns, a list of the principal roads, stage and steamboat routes, land offices, tracts of land unoccupied — a description of the timbered and prairie portions of the state; the rivers, minerals, animals, internal improvements, climate, and seasons — with much other original and valuable information for the traveller, the emigrant, the man of business and the citizen; the whole intended as a companion to the new sectional map of Illinois. New York, Colton, 1839. 219 p., map. HWL 341

Also, ibid. [1840]. 219 p., map. L

Embodyes much of the same material as his Gazetteer of Illinois (no. 278). The map is by Peck and Messinger and is probably the first sectional map of the state.

The western tourist and emigrant's guide, with a compendious gazetteer of the states of Ohio, Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, and Missouri, and the territories of Wisconsin, and Iowa . . . also, describing all the principal stage routes, canals, railroads and the distances between the towns; accompanied with a correct map showing the lines of the United States surveys, by J[ohn] Calvin Smith. New York, Colton, 1839. 180 p., map. IN 348

The editions from 1844 to 1856, inclusive, were issued anonymously with the binder's title Colton's Western tourist and are usually listed under Colton. The map is by Smith, however, and the title-page of the earlier editions would indicate that he was the original compiler of the work. It is one of the best of the early guidebooks, the section on Illinois containing brief descriptions of each county, lists of towns, etc. The schedules of stage-routes is also useful and the map depicts the states of the Northwest, with counties, towns, roads, canals, and railroads, including projected improvements. The data in this book formed the basis of parts of many other guidebooks and gazetteers. See, for examples, nos. 381, 412, 458, 468.

Based on his trip to America in 1842 during which he went down the Ohio and up the Mississippi to St. Louis, through Belleville and Lebanon to the Looking-Glass Prairie, and back by way of the rivers. Considerable space is devoted to Cairo, which place is also caricatured under the name of Eden in Martin Chuzzlewit. Dicken's impressions of the West were distinctly unfavorable and the book aroused considerable feeling. William Kinney, a Baptist minister, who had been lieutenant-governor of Illinois, wrote an "Answer to Dicken's American notes" which was published serially in the Belleville advocate in the fall of 1842. A few years later this was republished by Robert K. Fleming in a pamphlet which is now very rare. An extract from this is reprinted in Illinois State Historical Society, Transactions, 1904, pp. 441-444. See also: John M. Lansden, History of Cairo, chap. xxii (Chicago, 1910) J. F. Dr. Salzbacher, who was "Domkapitular zu St. Stephan in Wien," devotes a chapter to the diocese of Chicago. He tells also of a trip to St. Louis by way of the Ohio and Mississippi rivers and back across Illinois by stage to Vincennes. An extract is reprinted as "Im Jahre 1842 von St. Louis nach Detroit," in Deutsch-amerikanische Geschichtsblätter, VIII, 115-118 (July, 1908).

2d ed., rev. & enl., Edinburgh, Oliver & Boyd; etc. [1852]. 408 p. IHWL — Reissued without change as The western wilds of America; or, Backwoods and prairies; and scenes in the valley of the Mississippi. 2d ed., enl., Edinburgh, Menzies & Nimmo, etc., 1859. 408 p. HCF

Sabin gives the date of the first edition as “[1842]” but the book has internal evidence of having been written in 1852. Regan emigrated from Scotland in 1842 and located in Fulton County near Ellisville. He gives, in story form and with considerable dialogue, an account of his life and experiences in Illinois, narratives of many trips in different parts of the state, and descriptive matter. Much of it is in the form of quotations from letters.

of New Glarus [Wisconsin], 1845. Wisconsin historical collections, xv, 292-337 (1900). UIHJCNWL 393

Translated from the German original by John Luchsinger. Duerst was one of the leaders of a colony of Swiss which finally settled in Wisconsin. Leaving the rest of the company in St. Louis, he and another made a trip through northern Illinois by way of Peoria and Freeport to Galena. His narrative is interesting and informing. Further material on this colony with additional descriptive matter on northern Illinois in 1845 can be found in ibid., VIII, 441-445 (1879); XII, 355-382 (1892).

German ed. as Der deutschen Wegweiser nach den Staaten Wisconsin, Illinois und Iowa . . . Ibid. 180 p., map. W

Based in part on personal observation, this is one of the best descriptive books of the period. The first part is in the form of "trips" from Buffalo by the lakes to Chicago and by the Illinois and Mississippi rivers to St. Paul with descriptions of the towns and counties along the route. Later a section of about a hundred pages is devoted to a more formal description of the state of Illinois, its towns, counties, people, rivers, canals, and railroads. Another section contains extensive extracts from letters written by a Mr. Thompson while traveling down the Illinois and up the Mississippi rivers in the summer of 1851; his accounts of Chicago, La Salle, Peoria, Jacksonville, and Galena being of especial interest. Valuable, also, is the list of papers and periodicals in Illinois which gives the location of each, its frequency of publication, and its political or other character.

The preface, dated March, 1852, and signed by the publisher, states that the letters were written by a young German to his "Verwandten in der Heimath." He traveled by steamboat down the Ohio and up the Mississippi to St. Louis, spent a month or two on a farm at "Patt'sfield's Grove Settlement" in St. Clair County, Illinois, and then went on up the Mississippi and Illinois rivers and across to Chicago. Besides telling of the trip, three of the letters, written from the farm, tell of social and agricultural conditions, especially among the German emigrants.

About four pages are devoted to descriptive matter on Illinois, its prairies, rivers, principal cities, and routes of travel. The Library of Congress card treats the Companion hand-book as a reissue of the Illustrated hand-book but the latter is advertised as a separate publication in the 1864 edition of the former. They appear to contain about the same material but arranged in different ways. The later editions of the Illustrated hand-book are in two parts: (1) "The northern and eastern states" and (2) "The southern and western states and the territories." Each part was also issued separately. For an earlier series of Appleton's guidebooks by Wellington Williams see nos. 427, 466. There are many editions after 1865 edited by Edward H. Hall and others.

A descriptive account of Illinois occupies one chapter.

COUNTY HISTORIES, ATLASES, AND
BIOGRAPHICAL COLLECTIONS

THE HISTORIOGRAPHY OF ILLINOIS COUNTIES

The field of local history in America is one which the trained historical scholar has not deigned to cultivate. In the East, where the local unit is the town, local antiquarians have interested themselves in the past of their communities and as a result many town histories have been published, some of which are of great excellence. In the Middle West, where the towns or townships have little unity or significance, the county is the principal community unit; and, as a consequence, western local histories are generally histories of counties rather than of towns. During the third quarter of the last century a number of such histories were produced as the result of the historical instincts and individual initiative of the compilers, and such books continued to appear from time to time; but the great mass of county histories produced in the West during the last forty years has been the work of business enterprise, pure and simple — an enterprise which finds its basis in human vanity, in the desire of the average middle-class American to see his name in print and to be able to read in a book glowing accounts of himself, his family, and his neighbors, their virtues, and their achievements.

In the compilation of histories of this sort the initiative comes from the publisher and generally no other name appears on the title-page. A number of agents or, as some of the prefaces express it, "a corps of experienced historians,"¹ are sent into the county to interview old settlers, gather biographical data, and secure subscriptions. The privilege of having a biographical sketch in the work is generally contingent upon subscribing for a copy of it, and a special charge is made for the insertion of a cut. In the case of the better works of this sort, the county records are examined more or less cursorily, and extensive transcripts are sometimes made of early minutes of the county court, of the proceedings in criminal cases, and of other documents which might interest the curious. Occasionally lists of county officers and statistics of elections are compiled from the records.

This material gathered by the agents is sent in to the office of the publishing firm and there worked up into a "history;" or, if biographical data alone have been collected, it will appear, perhaps, as "a portrait and biographical record" of the county. If it is to be a history, such histories of the same county as may have been published previously are drawn upon freely and without acknowledgement; and a large amount of general matter on pioneer life and customs and on the history of the state and of the Northwest is embodied from histories of other counties in the same series. Frequently the books are so arranged that many of the same stereotyped plates can be used over and over again. If the work in preparation is merely a biographical collection, stereotyped "biographies of the governors of the state and of the presidents of the United States" are usually inserted.

That books which have been compiled in this fashion are unreliable for specific facts is obvious. Because of this many historical workers have been inclined to reject them altogether as sources of information. To the student with critical ability, however, who knows what to accept and what to reject, they have a very considerable value. The probability of error is certainly no greater than in the medieval chronicles, and much of the information which can be gleaned from them and which might otherwise escape the investigator can be verified from more original sources to which they point the way. To the student who is interested in problems involving statistical studies of large numbers of people, they are of great value and their inaccuracies in individual cases do not vitiate the results of such studies. For example, a volume which gives, as some of them do, the name, occupation, religion, politics, date and place of birth, and date of coming to the county of practically every tax-payer and voter in the county furnishes the material for valuable and interesting studies of the different sectional elements in the population and for comparisons between the various streams of immigration at different periods. The plat books and atlases too furnish data for studies in the size of land-holdings; and, when two or more have been published for the same county, the economic development along this and other lines can be shown. Many of these atlases contain, also, "Patrons' directories" which give in a more condensed form the same sort of biographical information as do the histories and biographical collections.

On the whole, then, it would seem that no historical library is doing its full duty which fails to collect and preserve, so far as possible, all books of this sort relating to parts of the territory which it attempts to cover. The amount of duplication may seem excessive, and the chaff out of proportion to the wheat; but as time goes on and the people and conditions with which these books deal fade away into the remote past, and as the books themselves become scarce and difficult to procure, the value of such a collection will be more and more apparent.

Interest in county history seems to have made its first appearance in Illinois in the county of Lake in the northeastern corner of the state. Less than a dozen years after the first permanent settlement by a white man in the county there appeared in the newly established Little-Fort porcupine and Democratic banner, two series of articles entitled "Historical sketches of Lake County" and "Political history of Lake County," which ran through the numbers from March 12 to April 2 and April 9 to June 4, 1845, respectively. These were probably written by Archimedes B. Wynkoop, the editor of the paper,¹ though Elijah M. Haines, the well-known lawyer, politician, and writer, may have had something to do with them. Seven years later, in 1852, Haines issued his Historical and statistical sketches of Lake County, the first history of an Illinois county to be published in book form.

During the remainder of the decade of the fifties, similar historical sketches appeared for Stephenson (1854), Bureau (1857), Du Page (1857), Ogle (1859), and Putnam and Marshall together (1860). These are pamphlets or small books running from about one to two hundred pages and devoted largely to setting forth the "present advantages" of the respective counties. It will be noted that, although the southern part of the state had been settled much longer than the northern, all these counties are located in the north. It is evident that the same spirit which prompted William Bradford to write his History of Plymouth Plantations was still active among the descendants of the Puritans in northern Illinois.

In 1858 and 1859 county directories containing historical matter appeared for Kane, La Salle and Randolph.¹ The Randolph directory is especially valuable for its data on the settlement of the county. During the Civil War no local histories were published in Illinois but in 1866 there were issued gazetteers of McLean, Madison, and Sangamon counties, "containing historical and descriptive sketches." The prototype of the county atlases is a Map of Bureau County, Illinois, with sketches of its early settlement by Nehemiah Matson (1867); and the first county history on a large scale is Henry L. Boies, History of De Kalb (1868).

In 1870 the publication of Illinois county atlases was begun on a large scale by two firms, both with headquarters outside the state at the start. The firm of Andreas, Lyter, and Company, of Davenport, Iowa, issued "Atlas maps" of Knox (1870); McDonough (1871); Adams, Morgan, Pike, and Schuyler (1872); and

Greene, Scott, Tazewell, and Peoria (1873). With these should be included the Atlas of Hancock published by A. T. Andreas at Chicago in 1874.

The firm of Warner and Higgins of Philadelphia published an atlas of Edgar County in 1870. The firm appears then to have moved to Chicago where, under the names of Warner, Higgins, and Beers, and Warner and Beers, it issued atlases of Winnebago (1871); Warren and Whiteside (1872); Marshall, Stark, and Woodford (1873); Grundy, McLean, Macon, and St. Clair (1874); Bond, Bureau, De Witt, Henry, Macoupin, Moultrie, Piatt, and Shelby (1875); and La Salle (1876). Each of the books in this series contains an atlas of the United States in ten maps on a scale large enough to show the counties; an atlas of Illinois presenting three or four counties to the map; plats of all the towns in the county; general maps of the county, state, United States, and of the hemispheres; and atrocious cuts of houses, farms, and people. The letter-press matter contains brief historical and statistical sketches of the county and towns and a "Patrons' directory" giving the name, postoffice, residence, occupation, nativity, and date of settlement in the county of all purchasers of the atlas. Atlases of Kankakee and Ford, along somewhat similar lines but with more extensive letter-press matter were issued by J. H. Beers of Chicago in 1883 and 1884.

Another series of atlases was started by Thompson and Everts of Geneva in 1871. This includes volumes for De Kalb and Stephenson (1871) and Kane (1872). Similar volumes for McHenry and Ogle (1872) were published by Everts, Baskin, and Stewart of Chicago, and for Will (1873) and Du Page (1874) by Thompson Brothers and Burr of Elgin. These contain in addition to the township plats, a considerable amount of historical and statistical matter, and business directories. Some of them contain patrons' directories similar to those in the Warner and Beer atlases.

A Philadelphia firm in which W. R. Brink appears to have been the principal figure entered the field in 1873. Under the names of Brink, McCormick, and Company and W. R. Brink and Company it published a series of "Illustrated atlas maps," which included volumes for Madison (1873); Sangamon, Cass, Mason, Menard, and Montgomery (1874); Douglas, Lawrence, Randolph, and Vermilion (1875); and Iroquois (1884). Like the other series, these atlases contained, in addition to the plats, historical and biographical sketches and a patrons' directory.

Meanwhile independent publications continued to appear from time to time. The Dixon telegraph and herald issued a History of Dixon and Lee County in 1870. A handbook of Vermilion County was published in 1870 and a Champaign County directory in 1871, each with historical material. Matson, Reminiscences of Bureau appeared in 1872; Henderson, "Sangamon Country" (Morgan, Scott, and Cass), in 1873; Duis, Good old times in McLean, and Woodruff's lecture on Joliet and Will County in 1874.

The centennial year with its numerous celebrations served to stimulate an interest in local history. A resolution of Congress dated March 13, 1876, recommended "to the people . . . that they assemble in their several counties or towns . . . and that they cause to have delivered . . . an historical sketch of said county or town from its formation, and that a copy of said sketch may be filed, in print or manuscript, in the Clerk's office of said county, and an additional copy . . . in the office of the Librarian of Congress." On April 22, 1876, Governor Beveridge issued a proclamation in which this resolution was quoted and the recommendation approved and emphasized.¹ Historical orations or addresses were delivered on July 4, 1876, in Cass, Champaign, Grundy, Hardin, Jersey, Pike, St. Clair, Schuyler, Scott, and Stephenson, and probably in other counties of the state. The sketch of Stephenson County appears to have been published in a local paper only, but all the others were issued in pamphlet form during the year.

More extensive histories issued during the centennial year were Macon by John W. Smith, Mason by Joseph Cochrane, Sangamon by John C. Power, Stark by Mrs. E. H. Shallenberger, and Williamson by Milo Erwin. The last is especially important because of its account of the "bloody vendetta" which throws a strong light on social conditions in "Egypt." In the same year George H. Woodruff published his second work on Will County, which was confined to the Civil War period. Mention should also be made in this connection of a History of Du Page County by C. W. Richmond, and a History of Douglas County by Henry C. Niles, which were published the following year. The county boards of these two counties took the resolution of Congress and the governor's proclamation to heart and made provision for the compilation of these works.

The centennial year saw also the inauguration of the first extensive series of Illinois county histories, which may for convenience be called the Kett series. This began with the publication of The voters and taxpayers of De Kalb County by H. F. Kett and Company of Chicago and a Biographical directory of the voters and taxpayers of Kendall by George Fisher and Company of Chicago. Which of these appeared first, and whether the names of the publishers as given on the title-pages are simply names for the same firm or the names of rival firms is difficult to determine but they follow the same general forms and use much of the same material. Similar works followed for Boone, Bureau, Henry, Lake, La Salle, McHenry, Rock Island, Warren, and Winnebago (1877); Carroll, Jo Daviess, Kane, Livingston, Logan, Morgan, Ogle, Will, and Woodford (1878); Coles, Edgar, Greene, McLean, Menard and Mason together (1879); Peoria, and Stephenson (1880); and Cumberland, Jasper and Richland together, and Douglas (1884).

Eleven of these works appear as by H. F. Kett and Company; eight by William Le Baron and Company; two by Donnelley, Loyd, and Company; one by Donnelley, Loyd, Gassette, and Company; two — the 1884 issues — by F. A. Battey and Company; and one each by George Fisher and Company, C. Walker and Company, O. L. Baskin and Company, Johnson and Company, and The Western Historical Company. All the publishers are Chicago firms and in some cases the different names appear to have been used to disguise the fact that the books belong to the same series, while in others one firm may have been the successor of another.

The general matter in this series consists of histories of the Northwest and of Illinois, an abstract of state laws, the constitution of the United States, and a variety of miscellaneous information and statistics. This matter is modified, condensed, or expanded, from time to time; but often the same stereotyped plates are used over and over again in different volumes. In addition the books contain histories of the respective counties and their subdivisions and a biographical directory giving, with varying completeness, the names, places of birth, dates of settlement, politics, occupations, etc., of the taxpayers and voters of the county. Not all the features mentioned are to be found in all the histories but the general make-up is the same throughout the series.

In 1878 a history of McDonough County, compiled by S. J. Clarke with the assistance of Charles C. Chapman, was published in Springfield by D. W. Lusk and Company. In this can be seen the germs of two series of Illinois county histories. The first or Chapman series begins with the publication of a history of Knox in 1878, followed by histories of Adams, Fulton, and Tazewell (1879); Hancock and Pike (1880); Sangamon (1881); White (1883); Greene and Jersey together, McDonough, and McHenry (1885); and La Salle and Logan (1886). Four of these are issued as by Charles C. Chapman and Company of Chicago; five by the Interstate Publishing Company of Chicago; two by the Continental Historical Company of Springfield; one by Chapman Brothers of Chicago; and one—Adams—by Murray, Williamson, and Phelps of Chicago. The Chapman, Interstate, and Continental companies, in spite of their different habitats, appear to be one and the same company; and the history of Adams by Murray, etc., while bearing a title similar to those used in the Kett series, seems, from the fact that some of the same stereotyped plates are used, to belong to the Chapman series. The volumes in this series contain, as a rule, a history of the state and an abstract of state laws, each differing materially from those in the volumes of the Kett series; histories of the county and townships; and "biographies of representative citizens."

Another series of histories was begun by Brink, McDonough, and Company of Philadelphia, and Edwardsville, Illinois, in 1878. This firm, which appears to have been a successor of Brink, McCormick, and Company, who published a series of atlases in 1873-75, issued histories of Champaign, Fayette, and Jackson (1878); Macoupin and Washington (1879); Christian and Macon (1880); Marion and Clinton together, St. Clair, and Shelby and Moultrie together (1881); De Witt, Madison, and Schuyler and Brown together (1882); Edwards, Lawrence, and Wabash together, and Randolph, Monroe, and Perry together (1883). The 1882 volumes are issued as by W. R. Brink and Company and the 1883 volumes by J. L. McDonough and Company. The histories in this series are among the best works of this sort which have been published for Illinois counties. The amount of general matter which is repeated is less than usual and extensive transcripts are given from the early county records. The township histories are followed by biographical sketches of "prominent men and pioneers" and most of the volumes contain patrons' directories.

A series of unusual merit, consisting of histories of Vermilion (1879), Iroquois (1880), Lee (1881), and Mercer and Henderson together (1882), was published by H. H. Hill and Company of Chicago. The first two were compiled by Hiram W. Beckwith of Danville and contain his "Historic notes on the Northwest."

The History of Menard and Mason counties (1879) in the Kett series was issued as by O. L. Baskin and Company of Chicago. This firm reappears with an independent series containing histories of Bond and Montgomery together, Cass, Du Page, and Grundy (1882); Alexander, Union, and Pulaski together, Crawford and Clark together, Effingham, and Jefferson (1883); Wayne and Clay together (1884); and Bureau (1885). The firm name changes to Globe Publishing Company in 1883 and this becomes World Publishing Company in 1885. Most of the volumes in this series are "edited by William Henry Perrin;" and they contain simply histories of the counties and townships and a collection of biographical sketches arranged by townships. A History of Gallatin, Saline, Hamilton, Franklin, and Williamson, issued in 1887 by the Good-speed Publishing Company of Chicago is similar in its make-up to the volumes in the Baskin series.

Of independent works published during the years 1877-85, the most valuable are Elmer Baldwin, La Salle (1877); Charles Bent, Whiteside (1877); Rev. E. W. Hicks, Kendall (1877); Spencer Ellsworth, Putnam and Marshall (1880); E. Newsome, Jackson; Emma C. Piatt, Piatt (1883); A. T. Andreas, Cook (1884); and Charles M. Eames, Morgan (1885). The History of Cook County by Andreas is a condensation with additions for the outlying towns of his three volume History of Chicago published the same year. A History of Dixon and Lee County was published by the Dixon telegraph in 1880, and directories of Sangamon and Logan counties, each containing historical matter, appeared in 1877 and 1880. The Philadelphia firm of D. J. Lake and Company issued in 1881 a series of atlases of Clay, Union, and Wayne counties "from actual surveys under the direction of B. N. Griffing."

The firm of Chapman Brothers of Chicago started a biographical series in 1885. In this the county histories, when included at all, are subordinated to the biographical material. Volumes were issued for De Kalb, Henry, Rock Island, and Whiteside (1885); Ogle, and Warren (1886); Champaign, Coles, and McLean (1887); Kane and Stephenson (1888); Jo Daviess and Carroll together, Morgan and Scott together, Vermilion, and Woodford (1889); Fulton, Peoria, and Will (1890); De Witt and Piatt together, Lake, Macoupin, Pike and Calhoun together, Sangamon, Shelby and Moultrie together (1891); Adams, Ford, Montgomery and Bond together, St. Clair, Winnebago and Boone together (1892); Christian, Iroquois, Kankakee, and Johnson, Massac, Pope, and Hardin together (1893); and Clinton, Washington, Marion, and Jefferson together, Cook and Du Page together, Hancock, McDonough, and Henderson together, Madison, Tazewell and Mason together, and Randolph, Jackson, Perry, and Monroe together (1894). A volume for Cook was also published without the Du Page in the same year; and another volume for Cook, with a different title and another publisher's name but containing some of the same material appeared the following year and ran through five editions (1895-97). A volume for Kendall and Will was published in 1901.

Of the volumes in this series, twenty-one were issued as by Chapman Brothers; thirteen by the Biographical Publishing Company; six by the Lake City Publishing Company; one (Kane, 1888) by Beers, Leggett, and Company; and one (Cook, 1895) by the Calumet Book and Engraving Company. Chapman Brothers and the Biographical and Lake City companies are certainly all one and the same firm using different names, and all the volumes in the series have the same general matter. This consists of "biographies and portraits of the governors of the state and the presidents of the United States" and it appears that the same stereotyped plates were used throughout, with additions for new governors and presidents and with occasional omissions of one set or the other when the space was needed for local biographies.

A new and extensive series of atlases was started in 1890 by Alden, Ogle, and Company of Chicago, the firm name changing in 1892 to George A. Ogle and Company. This contains plat books of Marshall and Putnam together (1890); Fayette, Hancock, and Macon (1891); Clark, Clinton, De Kalb, Kane, La Salle, McHenry, Marion, and Mercer (1892); Champaign, Coles, Greene and Jersey together, Jo Daviess, Logan, Macoupin, Ogle, Warren, Whiteside, and Will (1893); De Witt, Edgar, Morgan, Rock Island, Sangamon, and Stephenson (1894); Fulton, McLean, and Shelby (1895).

At this stage, the form of title was changed from "Plat-book" to "Standard atlas" and the series continued with Vermilion (1895); Peoria and Moultrie (1896); Bond, Henderson, and Lee (1900); Adams, Ford, Monroe, and Richland (1901); Brown and Knox (1903); Iroquois (1904); De Kalb and Winnebago (1905); Hamilton, La Salle, Madison, and Washington (1906); Edwards, Jackson, Lake, and Stark (1907); Carroll, Union, and Williamson (1908); Grundy and Saline (1909); Will (1909-10); Edgar, Logan, Piatt, Tazewell, and Wayne (1910); Christian, Henry, Livingston, and Marshall and Putnam together (1911); and Champaign, Fulton, Montgomery, Ogle, Pike, Warren, Whiteside, and Woodford (1912). It will be noted that two atlases have been published in this series for a number of counties. Some of the atlases issued during the years 1892-95 have as publishers: Occidental Publishing Company, D. W. Ensign and Company, American Atlas Company, Hammond Publishing Company, Northwest Publishing Company, or Field Publishing Company. Some of these are simply different names for the Ogle firm and all the books with the possible exception of those issued as by D. W. Ensign and Company belong to the same series.

The letter-press matter contained in the Ogle series of atlases is not extensive. The earlier issues contain historical directories giving condensed biographical data about large numbers of citizens. In the later issues, however, this is restricted to patrons, and the information about each individual is less complete. The later issues contain also supplements dealing with ancient and modern history and civil government.

A number of atlases have been published independently since 1885. An atlas of Boone and an atlas of Boone and Winnebago together were published in 1886 by William C. Sauer and Company and H. R. Page and Company respectively, both of Chicago. There were published, also, atlases of Madison (St. Louis, 1892); White, (Evansville, Indiana, 1901); Rock Island (Davenport, Iowa, 1905); Vermilion (Danville, 1907); and Hancock (Carthage, 1908). The Middle-West Publishing Company of Chicago issued "20th century atlases" of Du Page and Kane counties, in 1904. Histories published independently from 1886 to 1895 include Mathews and McLean, Pioneers of Champaign (1886); Documents and biography of Stark by M. A. Leeson (1887); the Menard-Salem-Lincoln souvenir album (1893); Recollections of the pioneers of Lee by the Columbian Club of the county (1893); and a Souvenir of Rock Island (1895).

The S. J. Clarke Publishing Company, the head of which had compiled a history of McDonough in 1878, started a biographical series in 1896. This consisted of volumes for Bureau, Marshall, and Putnam together (1896); Rock Island (1897); De Kalb and Kane (1898); McLean and Ogle (1899); Livingston and Woodford together, also Livingston alone, and Whiteside (1900); and De Witt, Henry, and Logan (1901). This series seems to have been a continuation in a way of the Chapman series which came to an end, except for the volume for Kendall and Will, about the time this began. The prefaces in the last volumes of the Chapman series and in the earlier volumes of the Clarke series are almost identical, but the biographies of presidents and governors are omitted from the Clarke volumes and they contain nothing but portraits and biographies of citizens of the counties.

In 1903 the S. J. Clarke Company began the publication of a series of histories with volumes for Macon and Vermilion (1903); followed by Christian, Montgomery, and Sangamon (1904); Adams, Greene, Menard, and Winnebago (1905); Bureau, Pike, and La Salle (1906); De Kalb, Iroquois, and Will (1907); Ford, Kane, and Whiteside (1908); De Witt, Henry, Macon, and Stephenson (1910); Logan, Macoupin, and Vermilion (1911); and Knox and Peoria (1912). The earlier volumes bear the title "Past and present," the later ones simply "History." Some of them are issued as by the Pioneer Publishing Company, a name which the S. J. Clarke Company uses when it has published an earlier work on the same county. Most of the histories in this series have the merit of having been edited by a local man with some personal interest in the subject. From one-half to three-fourths of the space is generally devoted to biographies; but, as many of the works are in two volumes, ample room is left for histories of the counties and towns.

The Munsell Publishing Company of Chicago brought out in 1899 an Historical encyclopedia of Illinois edited by Newton Bateman and Paul Selby. This was reissued the same year, in combination with a history of Knox County edited by W. S. and G. C. Gale. A long series of republications followed in combination with histories or biographical collections of different counties. This includes Lake and Peoria (1902); McHenry, Mercer, and Warren (1903); Kane and Lee (1904); Cook, Champaign, Edgar, and Tazewell (1905);

Coles and Morgan (1906); Clark, McDonough and St. Clair (1907); Fulton, McLean, and Schuyler (1908); Boone, Crawford, Livingston, and Ogle (1909); Douglas, Effingham, Fayette, Lawrence, and Shelby (1910); Henderson and Wabash (1911); Sangamon (1912); and Carroll and Du Page (1913). The extent of the county material in the Munsell publications varies from a couple of hundred pages to two good sized volumes; and there is about as much variation in quality. Like the volumes in the Clarke historical series, these are generally edited by local men; and their value depends largely on the ability and industry of the editor. In all of them the biographical sketches are prominent features; and a few contain no formal history of the county.

A number of other firms have turned their attention to the Illinois counties in recent years and the output of works of this sort bids fair to increase rapidly. The Lewis Publishing Company of Chicago (and New York) produced biographical volumes on La Salle alone and La Salle and Grundy together (1900), an Historical review of Chicago and Cook (1908), and a Centennial history of Madison (1912).¹ The firm of Richmond and Arnold of Chicago published a biographical volume on Macoupin (1904); and B. F. Bowen and Company of ¹ Another publication of this firm is George W. Smith, A history of southern Illinois; a narrative account of its historical progress, its people, and its principal interests (1912 3 v.). The first volume contains the general history and separate chapters on Alexander, Bond, Clark, Clay, Clinton, Crawford, Cumberland, Edwards, Effingham, Fayette, Franklin, Gallatin, Hamilton, Hardin, Jackson, Jasper, Jefferson, Johnson, Lawrence, Marion, Massac, Monroe, Perry, Pope, Pulaski, Randolph, Richland, St. Clair, Saline, Union, Wabash, Washington, Wayne, White, and Williamson counties. The second and third volumes are devoted to biographical sketches.

Indianapolis published histories of Jefferson and Marion and a Biographical and reminiscent history of Richland, Clay, and Marion (all 1909).

Works published independently since 1896 include Searching the records [of Macoupin] by John Moran (1897); histories of: Fulton, in the Lewistown republican (1897); Douglas by John Gresham (1900); Massac by O. J. Page (1900); Shelby published by Wilder of Shelbyville (1900); Rockford and Winnebago by C. A. Church (1900); Pioneers of Menard and Mason by T. G. Onstot (1902); Historical souvenir of Williamson by J. F. Wilcox (1905); Historical sketches of Cass by J. N. Gridley and others (1907); and histories of Cook by Goodspeed and Healey (1909), Woodford by Roy L. Moore (1910), and Lake by John J. Halsey (1912).

The last work deserves special mention as it is by far the best history of an Illinois county which has yet appeared. It is a coöperative work, the different chapters compiled by men with special facilities for treating their subjects, and the whole revised and co-ordinated by Professor Halsey of Lake Forest College. Although containing some biographies, these were selected on the basis of historical importance, since "no biographical mentions or portraits were . . . sold for either cash or subscriptions." The value of the work to the historical investigator is greatly enhanced by footnote references to sources and by a modern analytical index. It is to be hoped that in the course of time, trained scholars, local antiquarians, and public-spirited citizens will coöperate to produce similar histories of other counties in the state.

In the bibliography which follows, the principles of selection will be quite obvious. The intention has been to include everything dealing with an Illinois county as a whole which could be classified as a history, an atlas, or a biographical collection. This has been construed somewhat loosely, however, as evidenced by the inclusion of Moran, Searching the records (no. 954) and Flower, English settlement (no. 800). County directories published before 1870, most of which contain historical matter, have also been included. The arrangement is alphabetical by counties and chronological according to date of publication under each county. Volumes containing histories of more than one county are listed under each; but the title is generally abbreviated in all except the first entry. Other omissions in titles are merely of stereotyped phrases which have no special significance.

The list contains 463 items; but the elimination of duplications leaves the total number of works 407. For nine counties there is only one item; eleven have two, fifteen have three, fifteen have four, nineteen have five, fourteen have six, nine have seven, five have eight, and five have nine. The twenty counties having seven or more items are all located in the extreme north or in a belt which extends across the center of the state and includes Vermilion, Champaign, McLean, Logan, Sangamon, Morgan, Macoupin, and Madison counties. The region in which there has been the least interest in local history, if the number of county histories published can be taken as a criterion, is the southeastern part of the state including nearly all of the territory south and east of the Kaskaskia River.

An examination of the key letters discloses the fact that there is no single collection which contains half of the 463 items in the list. The Illinois State Historical Library and the Library of Congress come nearest to it, having 228 each; the numbers in the other libraries are: Chicago Historical Society, 206; Wisconsin Historical Society, 192; University of Illinois, 176; Chicago Public Library, 132; Newberry Library, 80. The Newberry Library has also a manuscript index to the biographical and genealogical material in most of these works in its collection. The Illinois State Historical Library has not only one of the largest but also the most representative collection, having at least one item for all but one (Calhoun) of the 102 counties of the state. The number of counties for which the other libraries have at least one item are: Wisconsin Historical Society, 99; Chicago Historical Society, 95; Library of Congress, 92; University of Illinois, 86; Chicago Public Library, 78; Newberry Library, 60. The State Historical Library and the University of Illinois each desires to secure as many as possible of these books, not already in its collection, and will purchase copies if offered at reasonable prices.

The information about the establishment and organization of counties, inserted at the head of the list for each county, will, it is believed, be of some convenience to the students who may use the bibliography. The dates of establishment of counties are given in the Bluebook for 1905 (page 436) but the more significant dates of actual organization are more difficult to obtain. They have been taken in most instances from the county histories and it has not been possible in all cases to check them up as thoroughly as would be desirable.

It is a question whether county organization should be dated from the first election or the first meeting of the county board. No uniformity in this matter could be secured because sometimes one and sometimes the other date was the only one available. For this reason the month in which organization took place, instead of a more specific date, is given.

No copies have been located of twenty-five of the atlases published by George A. Ogle and Company and the Munsell Publishing Company's volume for Edgar County. Information concerning these was derived from correspondence with the publishers. In all other cases titles and collations were secured by actual examination of the books themselves. The compiler is under obligations to the S. J. Clarke and Lewis publishing companies of Chicago for courteously allowing him to examine the books in their office libraries.

Special acknowledgments are due to Dr. Susan M. Reed, formerly of the University of Illinois, for assistance in collecting and arranging the data.

Searching the records [of Macoupin County]; begins with the general assembly of 1828-9, at Vandalia, Illinois — that year Macoupin County got government life — from this time to the end of 1869 the records have been searched for the truth of this book — this covers the construction of the three court houses — while the records are local to this county the questions discussed are forever universal: that is — mortgagor and mortgagee, the tax question — city, county, state, and federal taxation — bondholder and taxpayer — the money question is grasped from a constitutional standpoint — the topics, confusion, education, success, and the churches are also here discussed; by JOHN MORAN, Carlinville, Illinois. Springfield, State register, 1897. 201 p. IH 954

TERRITORIAL AND STATE LAWS
1788-1913

INTRODUCTORY NOTE

Studying the history of a community without a knowledge of its laws is somewhat akin to making bricks without straw, and yet that is what most writers on the history of the states in the Old Northwest have attempted to do. The early session laws were printed in small editions and many of them are now practically unattainable in the originals. When reprinted it has usually been in limited editions which soon became almost as rare as the originals. As a consequence, only a few of the large libraries in each state possess anything approaching complete sets of the session laws of the state, while complete sets of the laws of the Northwest, Indiana, and Illinois territories are almost unique. The Illinois State Historical Library possesses, as will be seen from the following list, a complete set of the territorial and state laws in force in Illinois from the establishment of the Northwest Territory to the present day. This is undoubtedly the only such set in the state and it is made up, in part, for the territorial period, of reprints and a transcript.

In view of the rareness of sets of these laws, of the confused forms in which they were published, and of the lack of bibliographical information about them, it is believed that this list will be of use to students of Illinois and western history. Other libraries in the Northwest, besides those indicated in the key letters, contain collections of these laws but it has not been thought necessary to add letters for them because the extent of their collections is indicated in the list of "Available material for the study of the institutional history of the Old Northwest" compiled by Isaac S. Bradley and printed in the Annual report of the American Historical Association for 1894 (pp. 296-319).¹ Other useful lists will be found in W. W. Chisholm, Catalogue of the law books of the Pennsylvania State Library (1899); R. R. Bowker, State publications (New York, Publisher's weekly, 1908); Catalogue of the law school of Harvard University (Cambridge, 1909. 2 v.); and Massachusetts State Library, Hand-list of legislative sessions and session laws (Boston, 1912). Second only to the laws in importance for historical purposes are the legislative journals and reports. These, however, are carefully listed, analyzed, and partially indexed in the Illinois volume of Adalaide R. Hasse, Index of economic material in the documents of the states (Washington, Carnegie Institution, 1909).

It is generally assumed that a complete set of the session laws contains all the laws enacted by the general assembly, but an examination of the "Index to the enrolled laws" in the office of the secretary of state at Springfield discloses the fact that a considerable number of laws have never been printed. These are scattered all through the early period, the most considerable group being the thirty private laws enacted by the sixth general assembly (see no. 1227). Occasionally laws which were printed separately were omitted from the volume containing the other laws of the session (see no. 1229) and the publication of laws in an official revision of the statutes was sometimes made an excuse for omitting them from the session laws (see no. 1272).

The revisions and compilations of the laws have also a considerable value for students of history. Official revisions are as much acts of the general assembly as the ordinary session laws and frequently extensive changes in the statutes are made by them. The compilations, whether official or private, are convenient when copies of the session laws are not available; and their annotations are frequently of great assistance to the historical student. Compilations of laws relating to special subjects, such as real estate or education, are numerous and frequently convenient, but to have included them in the list would have made it unduly cumbersome. The same is true of pamphlet issues of individual laws, most of which are separates from the session laws.

The earlier volumes of session laws generally contain reports of various state officers in the appendix, and in some cases public and private laws are bound together in the same volume. A question arose as to whether such volumes should be viewed as single items or as several independent items bound together. The principle finally determined upon was to consider them as single items unless the different parts had separate title-pages with imprints and were separately paged. In the citation of statutes, a generally recognized system has been developed by the legal profession, and it is believed that the indication of the usual form of citation with each item will be of some convenience.

These should be used only for the official edition, unless another edition is definitely specified. The exact dates of the legislative sessions are also given in the notes unless they appear in the titles.

Special acknowledgments are due to Miss Edith Emigh of the University of Illinois Library for assistance in collecting and arranging the data.

TERRITORIAL AND STATE LAWS 1788-1913

SESSION LAWS

1788-91

Laws passed in the Territory of the United States, North-west of the River Ohio, from the commencement of the government to the 31st of December, 1791—published by authority. Philadelphia, Childs & Swaine, pr., 1792. 68 p. IHL 1201

Reprinted in SALMON P. CHASE, Statutes of Ohio and of the Northwestern Territory from 1788 to 1833 inclusive . . ., I, 92-114 (Cincinnati, Corey & Fairbanks, 1833-35. 3 v.) NW—Also in Laws of the Territory Northwest of the River Ohio, 92-114 (Cincinnati, 1833. 350 p.) IHW—Also, facsimile reprint of the original [Cincinnati, 1890]. HN

The first laws of the Northwest Territory were enacted by the governor and judges at Marietta in July, 1788. Other laws were enacted during these years at Vincennes and Cincinnati. For further information about these laws and the circumstances under which they were passed see William H. Smith, The St. Clair papers, II (Cincinnati, Clarke, 1882. 2 v.); Indiana Historical Society, Publications, II, 8-13. The titles of these acts and abstracts of some of them are given in John B. Dillon, History of Indiana, 214-217, 235, 297-299 (Indianapolis, Bingham & Doughty, 1859). The Laws of the Territory Northwest of the River Ohio consist of three hundred and fifty pages of the first volume of Chase, Statutes of Ohio, with a new title page.

Laws passed in the Territory of the United States, North-west of the River Ohio, from July to December, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-two, inclusive — published by authority. Philadelphia, Childs & Swaine, pr., 1794. 74 p. IHL 1202

Reprinted in CHASE, Statutes of Ohio, I, 114-137 (see no. 1201). NW—Also in Laws of the Territory Northwest of the River Ohio, 114-137 (see no. 1201). IHW—Also, facsimile reprint of the original [Cincinnati, 1890]. HN

The titles of these acts and abstracts of some of them are given in Dillon, Indiana, 299-301.

Laws of the Territory of the United States Northwest of the Ohio, adopted and made by the governor and judges, in their legislative capacity, at a session begun on Friday, the xxix day of May, one thousand, seven hundred and ninety-five, and ending on Tuesday, the twenty-fifth day of August following; with an appendix of resolutions and the ordinance for the government of the territory — by authority. Cincinnati, Maxwell, pr., 1796. xiii, 225 p. IHWL 1203

Reprinted in CHASE, Statutes of Ohio, I, 138-204 (see no. 1201). NW—Also in Laws of the Territory Northwest of the River Ohio, 138-204 (see no. 1201). IHW—Also, facsimile reprint of original [Cincinnati, 1890]. HN

The validity of many of the laws previously enacted was questioned because they were not "laws of the original states" such as the governor and judges were authorized by the Ordinance of 1787 to adopt. The laws of 1795 were selected from those of Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, Virginia, New York, and New Jersey and formed an elaborate code of thirty-eight laws. This is known as Maxwell's Code from the name of the printer which appears in the binder's title. The titles of these acts are given in Dillon, Indiana, 375-378.

Laws of the Territory of the United States Northwest of the River Ohio, adopted and published at a session of the legislature begun in the town of Cincinnati, county of Hamilton and territory aforesaid upon the 23d day of April in the year of our Lord 1798 and continued by adjournments to the seventh day of May in the same year — by authority. Cincinnati, Freeman, pr., 1798. 32 p. IHL 1204

Reprinted in CHASE, Statutes of Ohio, I, 204-210 (see no. 1201). NW—Also in Laws of the Territory Northwest of the River Ohio, 204-210 (see no. 1201). IHW—Also, facsimile reprint of the original [Cincinnati, 1890]. HW

Commonly known as Freeman's Laws. For titles and abstracts, see Dillon, Indiana, 389.

Laws of the Territory of the United States North-west of the River Ohio, passed at the first session of the general assembly, begun and held at Cincinnati, on Monday, the sixteenth day of September, A. D. one thousand, seven hundred and ninety nine; also, certain laws enacted by the governor and judges of the territory, from the commencement of the government to December, one thousand, seven hundred and ninety two; with an appendix containing resolutions, the ordinance of Congress for the government of the territory, the Constitution of the United States, and the law respecting fugitives — vol. I — published by authority. Cincinnati, Carpenter & Findlay, pr., 1800. 280 p. IHWL 1205

Reprinted in CHASE, Statutes of Ohio, I, 211-287 (see no. 1201). NW—Also in Laws of the Territory Northwest of the River Ohio, 211-287 (see no. 1201). IHW

The first of these laws was an act to confirm the laws enacted by the governor and judges prior to 1795. For titles and abstracts see Dillon, Indiana, 392-395.

Laws adopted by the governor and judges of the Indiana Territory, at their first sessions held at Saint Vincennes, January 12th, 1801 — published by authority. Frankfort, Kentucky, Hunter, pr., 1802.

state journal, pr., 1906. xiv, 34 p. (ILLINOIS STATE HISTORICAL LIBRARY, Bulletin, I, no. 2.) UIHJCWL

The governor and judges of Illinois Territory met June 13, 1809, and adopted a resolution declaring "the laws of Indiana Territory of a general nature" in force in Illinois. Thirty-five laws were enacted by the governor and judges, the last being dated November 9, 1811. They were published in the Louisiana gazette of St. Louis beginning February 15, 1810. The original laws have disappeared from the archives of the state. In 1897 copies of four of them were discovered in the archives at Washington and these were published in a pamphlet entitled Information relating to the territorial laws of Illinois, passed from 1809 to 1812; prepared by Edmund J. James (Springfield, Phillips, pr., 1899. 15 p. Illinois State Historical Library, Publications, no. 2). In 1905 copies of all but five were found in the court-house of Randolph County at Chester and about the same time all but two were found in a file of the Louisiana gazette in the office of the St. Louis republican. From these various sources the complete edition listed above was published.

1812

Laws passed by the legislative council & house of representatives of the Illinois Territory at their first session held at Kaskaskia, in 1812 — printed by authority from the governor. Russelville, Kentucky, Duncan, pr., 1813. 59 p. I 1215

The session convened November 25, and adjourned December 26, 1812.

1813-14

Laws of the territory of Illinois revised and digested under the authority of the legislature by Nathaniel Pope. Kaskaskia, Duncan, pr., 1815. 2 v. IHWL 1216

These volumes contain a selection of laws from the Indiana "Revision of 1807" (no. 1212); the laws enacted by the Indiana territorial legislature in 1808; the laws of the governor and judges of Illinois Territory, 1809-11; and the laws enacted by the Illinois territorial legislature, 1812-14. With the exception of one act they are the only contemporary publication in book form of laws enacted at the sessions of November 14, 1813, and November 14-December 24, 1814. The exception is that in A law establishing a supreme court, and documents; published by a joint resolution of the legislative council and house of representatives of Illinois Territory (Kaskaskia, Duncan, pr., 1814. 25 p. 1299 Cited as Laws of 1911-12. The first special session was held, with long recesses, from June 14 to November 14, 1911, the second from March 26 to June 5, 1912, the third from April 24 to June 5, 1912, thus presenting the curious anomaly of two sessions being held simultaneously. There are separate title-pages for the laws of each session but they are without imprints and the volume is paged continuously throughout. The laws of the first special session were also published separately (Springfield, Illinois state journal, pr., 1912. 10 p.) and bound with the Journals, the volume having the general title: Laws of the state of Illinois and journals of the senate and house of representatives, first special session of the 47th general assembly — printed by authority of the general assembly of the state of Illinois, 1911 (Springfield, Illinois state journal, pr., 1912. 10, 111, 140 p. REVISIONS AND COMPILATIONS

The revisions of 1807, 1815, 1827, 1829, and 1833 are included with the session laws (nos. 1212, 1216, 1225, 1227, and 1229) because they contain the only contemporary publication in book form of the laws of certain sessions. Their titles are not repeated here. This list contains only revisions and compilations of a general nature — no attempt has been made to include works which contain laws relating to special subjects only.

The public and general statute laws of the state of Illinois; containing all the laws published in the "Revised statutes" of 1833, except such as are repealed; together with all the acts of a general and public nature, passed by the ninth general assembly at their first session commencing December 1, 1834, and ending February 13, 1835; and at their second session, commencing December 7, 1835, and ending January 18, 1836; and those passed by the tenth general assembly at their session commencing December 5, 1836, and ending March 6, 1837; and at their special session commencing July 10 and ending July 22, 1837; which are not repealed; and also the militia law; compiled and arranged alphabetically with occasional references. Chicago, Gale, 1839.

Reference is to numbers unless otherwise indicated. The items in the bibliography of travel and description have been classified roughly into Biographies and recollections, Descriptive accounts, Gazetteers, Geographies, Guides, and Travels (American, English, etc.). It should be borne in mind that only the information contained in the titles and notes could be indexed and the lack of reference to a work under a particular heading does not mean that the work itself contains nothing on the subject of that heading.
